

Pour It On: Color Pouring in Watercolor with Janet Campbell

Description:

The pouring of watercolor paint can create beautiful and dreamy effects in your painting. Through instructor demonstration, you will be guided in the use of masking fluid, the selection and preparation of colors, and the pouring of paint to establish amazing blending effects. Bring your drawing and a readiness for fun and spontaneity to this class. For those with a basic knowledge of watercolor techniques. Second day will focus on doing multiple pours.

Materials List for Color Pouring

Paper: 140 lb. cold press professional watercolor paper (preferably Arches). I don't recommend Fabriano for this workshop as it takes too long to dry. This can be ¼ sheet or ½ sheet depending on what you are comfortable working on. It's recommended that your drawing be already put on paper. (A variety of subjects can be used: florals, still life, landscapes, figures. A b&w copy of the reference may help in identifying which areas will be left as white, which will be the midtones, and which will be the darks.)

Sketchpad or inexpensive paper to do value sketch on.

Backing Board for your paper that is water resistant.

2" masking tape for the special way the paper gets mounted on the backboard.

Brushes: Assortment of good quality brushes. A one-inch flat or large round to move the poured color around. A large brush (a 2inch flat is good) for wetting the paper. (I also mark three #10 or #12 rounds with blue, red, and yellow tape for use in mixing)

Masking fluid: A bottle of masking fluid that can be applied with brushes. I like Incredible White Mask the best. Rubber cement pickup, if you have one, for removing masking fluid. Old bar of soap (hotel sized) for using on brush before dipping in masking fluid or liquid Dawn detergent.

Brushes for masking fluid: A #2 round and a ¼" flat brush –or bigger if you have large sections to mask. These should be inexpensive brushes as once they are used for masking fluid they may not function well for paints. If you have a ruling pen, bring it.

Pencil - #2B and eraser

Tube Watercolors in 3 primary colors - transparent is best. These should be professional grade. Some examples: Gamboge, Alizarin Crimson Red, and Ultramarine Blue or Quinacrodone Red, Lemon Yellow, Prussian Blue. Plus any additional colors you'd like to bring on a palette.

Water Containers, Paper Towels

Water Spray Bottle

3 small containers for holding the prepared colors for pouring. Size could be like the small yogurt containers you buy at your local supermarket.

Pan (butcher's pans are good) or plastic tray or cookie sheet with edge to catch excess poured pigment.

Hairdryer if you have one – I will have one that can be borrowed.

This can get messy! Wear clothes you don't mind messing up.
